Most agents have some experience with estimating the price of a property. When the properties have unique features or are located in unique areas, estimating market value is more difficult. This course will assist real estate license holders in learning about paired sales analysis, cost estimating, and other methods for arriving at values. It will also help license holders become more comfortable with the overall process, how to make adjustments, and where to go for more information on adjustments. Time will be spent on actually completing a CMA of a unique property and discussing possible outcomes.

The course will provide a hands-on experience in preparing a unique CMA and where to find information that can be used in day-to-day scenarios, which will better assist their clients.
